Abstract

It is becoming increasingly clear to me that the multis (multicultural people) need to be a lot more active in their culture bashing of the monos (mono cultured people) to “shake them out of their monocultured ignorance” that is so damaging to them, because they are unaware of the superiorities of corresponding norms in other cultures. Multis, especially globist multis (i.e. multis who want to live in a global state) really want the world to have a global government, fully democratic, that could eliminate war, the arms trade, ignorance and poverty from the world, and hence are strongly motivated to do what is needed to create that global state (called “Globo”). One prerequisite for the creation of a global state is cultural homogenization. (The world will not unify with the current differences in culture, religion, ideology, etc). With the internet speed doubling every year, soon the world will be able to receive the media of the whole planet, leading to the firm establishment of a global language (English), which will help enormously in the global exchange of ideas. With this exchange will come culture bashing, and globist multis see that as a good thing, and encourage it, because it will cause monos to have their conscious raised about the damage caused to them by some of their own (inferior – as seen by the multis) customs. For this reason, the globist multis are now actively, energetically, culture bashing, trying to promote the growth of cultural homogenization that culture bashing generates. When the whole planet is subject to the hefty criticisms of the whole planet, then nearly everyone will choose the planet's "best" customs and norms, hence cultural homogenization, and hopefully then, the creation of a global state with all its wonderful benefits – no more wars, no arms trade, no ignorance, no poverty.
