

How will the rise of freeprofing impact on universities? Professors at universities will not need to teach. Students will be able to watch the best teachers on a topic on the internet. So what will universities do, if students no longer want to attend traditional classroom lectures? Companies and universities will be set up to handle correction of homeworks, and exams, which should be much cheaper. Traditional universities will have to adapt or die. Universities will become research based and drop off their teaching side, except for the admin of homeworks and exams. They will become much smaller, catering only to the researchers who want to be in face to face contact for reasons of synergy.