

GLOBAL ALPHAS

Abstract

Once the planet culturally homogenizes globally, pretty much the only thing that is left that can not be homogenized is the genetic component in people's abilities. This essay talks about which social/geographic groups will play the dominant role in generating and driving world culture and intellect several decades from now. In short, this essay predicts it will be the Europeans (at 0.7 billion people), the Chinese (at 1.4 billion) and the Americans. These 3 groups will be the "global alphas." This elite group will not include the Indians, despite their 1.2 billion people, because their average IQ is only 85, which is the same as the Arabs, who will also not belong to the alphas. This essay describes in more detail, which of today's national cultures will become members of this global alphas club and why.
