Abstract

Good sex is fundamental to the mental health of the individual and the couple, yet too many people only have a smattering of knowledge of sexual techniques that could enhance greatly their sexual pleasure. Most people develop sexual techniques on their own, without any help from organized instruction. This essay proposes that an internet based “sex school” be established that would create videos providing systematic knowledge of the sexual techniques known to humanity, and that they be taught in a manner that everyone can understand. This internet based “sex school” would have as its aim, the betterment of the general happiness of the population of the world, by creating greater sexual happiness based on greater sexual satisfaction, due to better, knowledge based, sex.
